Message from the Chair

It is with great pleasure that I present to you the Canadian Institute for Research on Linguistic Minorities' (CIRLM) 2013-2014 Annual Report. For two years now, I have been President of the Board of Directors, and I have been in a position to witness the importance of the Institute's mission for the development of Official Language Minority Communities (OLMCs).

When you read this report, you will be able to witness as I did the diversity of the fields of research at the CIRLM as well as the extent of its collaborations. Over the years, the Institute has never ceased developing its fields of expertise and multiplying its partnerships with various community actors, be they researchers, political decision-makers or community stakeholders. Among the topics studied this year, the CIRLM's researchers were particularly interested in institutional governance, access to health services, educational policy, poverty and food safety. Their active participation in forums, research groups and seminars also allowed them to undertake new studies on immigration and culture in Canada's French-speaking communities and with Quebec's English-speaking communities.

The CIRLM team can count on a large network of collaborators throughout Canada and outside its borders. These collaborators participate in the Institute's research as Associate Researchers. They contribute to the Institute's outreach, since it is able to share its expertise with Canadian and international colleagues in the field of official language minorities. In Quebec, the Quebec English-Speaking Communities Research Network (QUESCREN) continues to coordinate research and outreach activities that attract the interest of researchers and the general population.

Despite difficult times for research funding, the CIRLM continues to succeed in developing its research capability on OLMCs by analyzing important data for the communities' strategic development and by initiating various partnerships with government agencies (Heritage Canada, Citizenship and Immigration Canada) and the main organizations providing research grants (Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council). In light of this, we can only congratulate the new Executive Director, Mr.   ric Forgues, who, with the help of his team, was able to meet the funding challenge without compromising the quality of the Institute's research when he accepted his mandate a year and a half ago. For this reason, I urge you read this report and to learn about the efforts undertaken to continue to produce critical OLMC research

Raymond Th  berge, Rector and Vice-Chancellor, Universit   de Moncton

President of Board of Directors, CIRLM

Message from the Executive Director

In 2013-2014, the work undertaken by the team at the Canadian Institute for Research on Linguistic Minorities (CIRLM) allowed it to complete research projects that had already been started, to continue other projects and to develop new research projects. We strive to conduct research for which the results will be used by minority community stakeholders. But we would be unable to play this role if we did not produce research that meets the requirements of scientific rigour. Furthermore, the CIRLM pursues basic research activities that offer the necessary perspective to contribute to debates and to the advancement of academic knowledge on OLMCs. We feel that basic research and applied research feed off each other.

The research conducted this year was related to health services, vulnerable populations and existing services in French, cultural and language planning in education, the situation of francophone artists, the language training of university students, immigration, the language profiles of OLMCs, school enrolment, wage gaps and governance.

The CIRLM team also presented several funding applications for research projects, in addition to having been invited by outside researchers to participate in the preparation of funding requests. These funding requests were related to health, particularly on food safety and on geospatial analysis of the health needs of Francophones and of the services available; to literacy and francization in the context of minority education; and, on memory and identity-building.

The CIRLM pays particular attention to the dissemination of the results of its studies and strives to facilitate the transfer of knowledge to stakeholders working within the OLMCs. Knowledge transfer activities are the CIRLM's purpose. Without this transfer, the OLMCs would not benefit from the research. Whether it is through publishing reports, journal articles, chapters in collective works, or through participating in scientific workshops, seminars, conferences or symposia, the CIRLM team endeavours to make known the results of its studies. The creation of the Langues officielles et société collection by Presses de l'Université Laval offers an excellent showcase for the CIRLM's publications and for researchers interested in OLMCs. The collection's first work should be published soon. The newly-launched journal, Minorités linguistiques et société/Linguistic Minorities and Society, created and managed by the CIRLM, published two editions this year, and a third edition is about to be published. The number of editions in preparation indicates that the journal is responding to a need among researchers wishing to publish the results of their studies. In addition, the CIRLM team is also working to make its research known to the media and on the Internet (newsletters, Web site, social media). We have undertaken a complete overhaul of our website in order to improve the user navigation experience, and to facilitate access to information. This website overhaul also aims to render the site more compatible with new technology (tablets, smartphones, etc.).

Furthermore, the CIRLM promotes the training of students and new researchers by integrating them in research projects that offer them the opportunity not only to develop their research skills, but also their knowledge of the OLMCs. The success of the experience last year encouraged us to launch a competition this year with the goal of granting a fellowship and inviting a new researcher to the CIRLM to conduct research. Welcoming a new researcher would provide opportunities for stimulating discussion among researchers regarding not only linguistic minorities, but also research methodologies and theoretical perspectives that would allow us to understand issues faced by OLMCs.

It is important to note that the CIRLM's work is done in an environment where it is very difficult to secure funding for OLMC research. On the one hand, in the current environment of fiscal austerity, the federal government has significantly reduced its funding to OLMC research. Health Canada and Citizenship and Immigration Canada continue to fund research projects on important issues that matter to OLMCs. However, Heritage Canada has ceased funding community-based OLMC research projects. What this change in direction means for us is the end of its financial support to the Minorités linguistiques et société/Linguistic Minorities and Society journal, a decrease in its financial support to the Quebec English-Speaking Communities Research Network (QUESCREN), and its complete withdrawal of support the following year. The other departments have not yet developed a tradition of funding OLMC research. However, a knowledge requirement exists in other areas of government responsibility, such as human resources, the economy, cultural diversity, the status of women, seniors, sport, social development, as well as science and technology. Provincial governments have also entered a period of fiscal austerity, and research is suffering the consequences. Data indicates a decrease in funding for research at both the federal and provincial levels since the 2008 financial crisis ^[1].

In addition, community groups have a tendency of asking consulting firms rather than academics to conduct their studies. We feel that while consulting firms may be in a better position to conduct certain studies, several research projects could be conducted by academics. That would have the benefit of creating stronger ties between academia and community groups and of bridging the gap that seems to separate them. Both academics and community stakeholders must make an effort to get to know each other and to collaborate. Our experience has shown that this type of collaboration between community stakeholders and academia is a beneficial learning process for all. That is why the CIRLM will continue to support efforts seeking to build bridges between academia, community stakeholders and governments when it comes to research and knowledge transfer. OLMCs will be better off as a result.

We know that research is a vital component to ensuring OLMC vitality. Research results in useful and indispensable tools required by stakeholders in order to ensure that effective actions are taken within OLMCs. To invest in these tools means deciding to take measures that take into full account the needs of OLMCs and of the impact of measures taken by community actors. It means deciding to put into place informed public policy and community action.

In a time when government investment is conducted in a tight fiscal environment, it is all the more important to ensure that government and community-based measures are as effective as possible and that public funds are expended wisely. As this report was being written, the former Chief Statistician at Statistics Canada, Dr. Munir Sheikh, was giving a lecture at the University of Ottawa entitled Good Public Policies Need Good Evidence, during which he claimed that “public policy cannot contribute to the improvement of quality of life unless it is based on good evidence.”^[2]

In all of its activities, the CIRLM team renews its commitment to producing studies that are useful and relevant for OLMCs, all the while remaining aware of emerging issues and of issues which, even though they are important, are seldom or never studied by researchers. Through our research, we hope to shed light on the issues which lie behind the development and vitality of OLMCs, in order to equip actors who contribute daily to the development of these communities. This work is possible thanks to the dedication of the entire CIRLM team, and thanks to the collaboration of the CIRLM’s Associate Researchers and Partners. I wish to extend my sincere appreciation to them for their dedication and their valuable contribution.

Mission and structure of the Institute¹

Mission of the Institute

The Canadian Institute for Research on Linguistic Minorities (CIRLM) plays a leadership role, brings people together and partners with research centers, researchers, community organizations and government authorities to promote knowledge of the situation of official linguistic minorities and to have a better understanding of the major issues that affect them.

Together with their partners, they are committed to conducting relevant research that supports various stakeholders in official language minorities and the people who create linguistic public policies.

Institute Committee Members

Board of Directors

The Board of Directors is made up of various Canadian institutions interested in the listed areas of research.

Three directors from the Université de Moncton:

- Mr. Jean-François Richard, Vice-Rector, Vice-Rectorate for Learning, Moncton Campus

- Mr. Neil Boucher, Vice-Rector, Vice-Rectorate for Learning and Research, Moncton Campus
- Mr. Edgar Robichaud, Vice-Rector, Vice-Rectorate for Administration and Human Resources, Moncton Campus

The Rector of the Université de Moncton, who acts as Chair on the Board of Directors:

- Mr. Raymond Théberge, Rector and Vice-Chancellor, Université de Moncton

Executive Director of the CIRLM:

- Mr. Éric Forgues, Executive Director, CIRLM

Senior Researcher with the Canadian Institute for Research on Public Policy and Public Administration (CIRPPPA):

- Mr. Richard Saillant, Executive Director, CIRPPPA

Representative of the Conférence des recteurs et des principaux des universités du Québec:

- Mrs. Yvonne da Silveira, Professor, Educational Science Academic and Research Unit and Director Educational Research, Training and Development in Inuit and Native American Settings, Université du Québec en Abitibi-Témiscamingue (UQAT)

Two people representing the Quebec Anglophone university community:

- Mrs. Cheryl Gosselin, Professor, Department of Sociology, Bishop's University
- Mr. Brian Lewis, Dean, School of Extended Learning, Concordia University

Person representing the Atlantic Francophone university community, excluding the Université de Moncton:

- Mr. Allister Surette, Rector and Vice-Chancellor, Université Sainte-Anne

Person representing the Ontario Francophone university community:

- Mrs. Diane Gérin-Lajoie, Professor, Centre de recherches en éducation franco-ontarienne, University of Toronto

Person representing Western Canada's Francophone university community:

- Mrs. Raymonde Gagné, Rector, Université de Saint-Boniface

Person representing the federal government (no voice) nominated by the Minister:

- Mr. Yvan Déry, Director, Official Languages Support Program, Canadian Heritage

Programs Committee

The Programs Committee advises the Board of Directors on its research programs, which deal with the following themes: 1) art, culture, identity, and diversity, 2) family, childhood, and education, 3) community vitality, 4) health in minority communities, and 5) OLMC law, governance, and public policies.

Investment Committee

The Investment Committee is made up of members from the Board of Directors. It regularly establishes and evaluates investment policies and guidelines regarding financial risk management, which are derived from guidelines relating to the investment policy.

CIRLM Staff

- Éric Forgues, Executive Director
- Anne Robineau, Assistant Director and Researcher
- Dominique Pépin-Filion, Researcher
- Josée Guignard Noël, Research Officer
- Lorraine O'Donnell, Coordinator-Researcher of Quebec English-Speaking Communities Research Network (QUESCREN)
- Hélène Gallant, Administrative Assistant (Due to Ms. Gallant's undetermined leave of absence, Céline H. Basque is the current administrative assistant for CIRLM)
- Azure René de Cotret, secretary

Institute Network

Associate Researchers

The Canadian Institute for Research on Linguistic Minorities (CIRLM) supports many of its research projects through associations with researchers. To recognize the contribution of research associates in its research activities, the CIRLM has created an associate researcher status to formalize this partnership. Fifty-three researchers are currently associated with the CIRLM.

We also have a list of researchers who study linguistic minorities. The list can be found on the Institute's website (www.icrml.ca) under "Research Directory" in the "OUR NETWORK" tab.

Research Partners

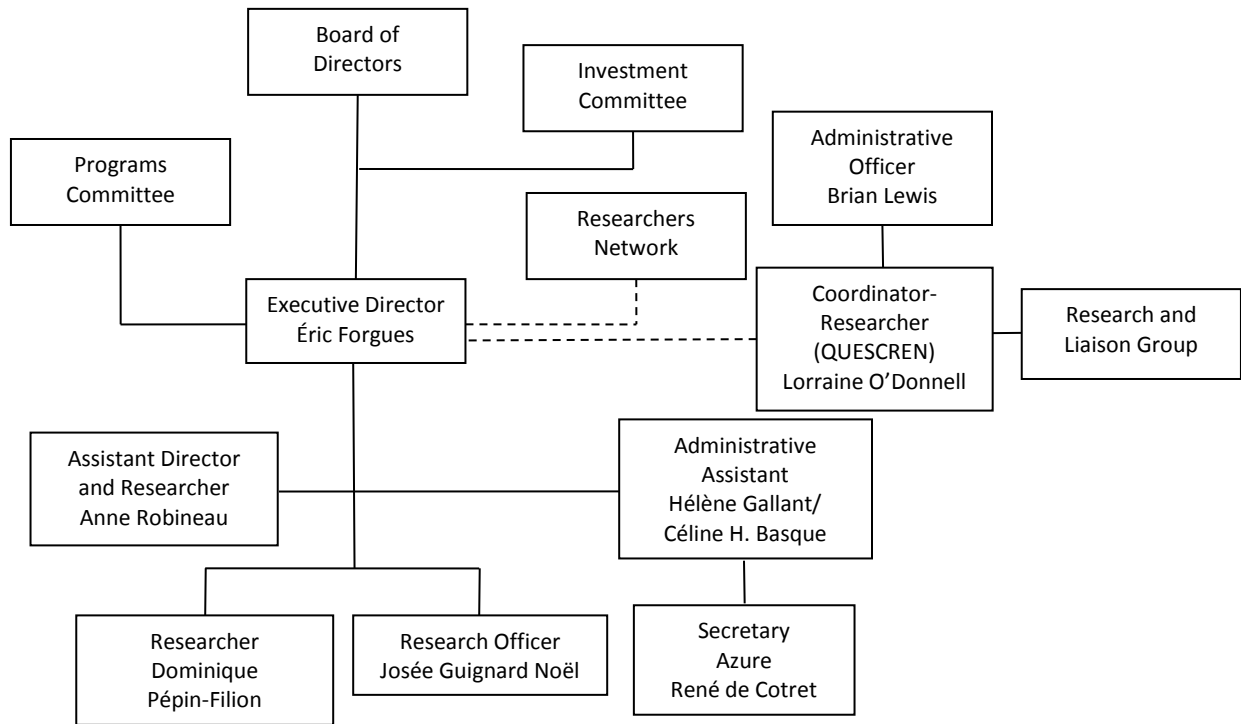

As part of its research and knowledge dissemination activities, the CIRLM has developed many relatively formal partnerships with other research organizations and community organizations. The CIRLM currently has 31 research partners.

Research Assistant Training

The CIRLM helps provide training for Research Students. In 2013-2014, eight students were hired to take part in research projects.

Organizational Chart

Research activities for 2013-2014²

Research projects

The CIRLM undertook thirty-one research projects (completed or ongoing), including several projects in partnership with universities, communities and the government.

Nine research projects were carried out: one on arts, culture, identity, and diversity; three on family, childhood, and education; four on the vitality of communities; and one on health in minority settings.

1. Arts, culture, identity and diversity

- Immigration and Quebec's English-speaking communities: Building knowledge about immigrants and community reception within an official language minority context: Lorraine O'Donnell (principal investigator), Anne Robineau (co-investigator), Dominique Pépin-Filion (co-investigator) et Josée Guignard Noël (co-investigator)

2. Family, childhood and education

Internet

Since the creation of the CIRLM website in 2007 (www.icrml.ca), many improvements have been made to better disseminate information. CIRLM would like its website to be a user-friendly tool for those interested in research on official language linguistic minorities in Canada. From April 1, 2013 to March 31, 2014, the CIRLM website had approximately 10 391 visits, of which 64 % were new visits. For 2014, CIRLM plans to redesign its website (design and structure) and continue its improvement.

Also the CIRLM website has a directory of researchers on Official Language Minority Communities (OLMC) including a registration form (there are currently 122 researchers listed). This section is being improved so that users can search not only by the first and last name of the researchers but also by their research interests. Recently, the CIRLM also added a directory of research teams, groups, centres and institutes on OLMC.

To promote its events, the CIRLM sends regular newsletters to members on its mailing list (currently 480 subscribers as of March 31, 2014). As another means of communication, the CIRLM created a Twitter account (twitter.com/ICRML_CIRLM). This social networking tool enables the CIRLM to send instant news updates. Created in June 2012, the CIRLM's Twitter account now has 162 followers.

As well, the CIRLM has a bibliographic database, accessible online through the CIRLM website, with 5,400 references. For 2014, CIRLM is planning the restructuring of the database for a better user accessibility.

As for QUESCREN, it has its own website (www.quescren.ca) and continued to add titles to its online annotated bibliography of publications on Quebec's English-speaking communities. Compiled by volunteer Brendan O'Donnell. Total number of titles listed: 8971 as of March 2014.

QUESCREN produced English- and French-language newsletters in April, May, July and October 2013 and January 2014. The newsletter provides subject-level access to news on publications, projects and events related to ESCQ research. Diffusion to 576 recipients as of March 2014. Note that as of July 2013, the formerly monthly newsletter became a quarterly.

QUESCREN also coordinates, organizes, and collaborates on research projects on Quebec's English-speaking communities. Examples include projects on immigration and seniors. Thus, QUESCREN undertakes, supports, and disseminates research on Quebec's English-speaking communities in accordance with its mandate to develop the capacity of research on these communities.
